This Aon Celtic Art workshop will cover basic and intermediate Celtic art techniques.

Participants will learn to construct a simple Celtic knot in the first part of the class, then we'll move forward into more advanced knots, freehand knotting, knotting within irregular shapes, 'trinity' or triangular knots, and finish with double and triple spirals.

Different cornering techniques will be covered, as well as different ways to weave the knots, join the spirals, and small embellishments.

Materials

required : pencil, eraser (the rest is supplied).

If desired students may also bring colored pencils, Pigma pens, and watercolors to color their finished works.

THE ART OF THE CELTS

All art work in this brochure is by the artist Cari Buziak and is used with permission.

Celtic knots or Celtic interlace are ornamental patterns that first became associated with Celtic people in the early Celtic Church where they were used to decorate Bible manuscripts, monuments (notably Celtic crosses and cross slabs) and jewelry.

Celtic knots are complete loops with no end or beginning. The repeated crossings of the physical and the spiritual are expressed in the interlace of the knots. The never ending path of the strand represents the permanence and the continuum of life, love and faith..

The Book of Kells is the best known source of Celtic knots as well as other types of Celtic ornament. The Book of Kells is a beautiful collection of paintings that illuminate the four Gospels in Latin, penned circa 800 AD. The incredible degree of ornament and detail caused Giraldus Cambrensis in the 13th century to call it: "the work not of men, but of angels"
